The average daily circulation of the Barre Daily Times for the week ending Saturday was copies, the largest paid circulation of any daily paper in this section.

President Fallieres of France knows what it is to have been under fire.

Even if the Japanese are not stealing the plans of our forts, several of their generals and admirals are stealing our admiration in their visits about the country.

The infrequent occasions on which Vermont chauffeurs of automobiles are fined for exceeding the speed limit is evidence that the local drivers of motor cars are, as a rule, careful to observe the restrictions of the law. The case in the Burlington city court yesterday is only the third, we believe, to come up in a Vermont court this summer, the chauffeur pleading guilty and paying a fine in two of the cases and being convicted in the third.

Judge Alton B. Parker who was recently acquainted with President Roosevelt, was nearly struck by a bullet while riding on a train. Now if Judge Parker had been president there would have been a great hue and cry that an attempt had been made to assassinate him. As it is, however, the bullet which entered his car is only taken to be a chance shot. Of course, it is not probable that the person, even if he knowingly aimed at the train, was aware of the fact that a once candidate for president was passenger or even that it was Judge Parker. The same condition might have obtained if the passenger had been some executive official instead of a former candidate for president. But there probably would have been a hysteria about an attempted assassination, whereas there really might not have been any more attempt to take life than in the case of Judge Parker. The Parker incident invites us to discount some of these wild rumors that are flying about in dull periods. It is always better not to paint a thing black unless it is black. There are enough black things in the world.

THE TIMES' TELEGRAPHIC NEWS SERVICE.

The formation of the United Press association by the joining together of the Publishers' Press, Scripps-McRae and the Scripps News associations, as announced in yesterday's paper, gives added prestige to an already strong news service. To readers of The Times the announcement is of interest because this paper is the client of the association, and, through it, receives from all parts of the globe the chronicle of events of larger moment. The Times is one of the 400 evening papers to receive the excellent news service afforded by the United Press. The association is not in the morning paper service, except for Sunday papers, of which it has a list of sixty journals. The other great news gathering association is the Associated Press, and the two share honors as world news collectors, they being with the exception of the New York Sun service, the most important. So by the consolidation of the three associations, above noted, into one organization will come more strength and better service, and the readers of The Times will receive the benefit of the union.

Not Rude.

A Germantown woman was not long ago watching a workman as he put up new window fixtures in her house.

"Don't you think that you have placed those fixtures too high?" asked she, having referred to the curtain rolls last put in place.

The workman, a stolid German, made no reply, but continued to adjust the fixtures.

"Didn't you hear my question?" demanded the lady of the house. "How dare you be so rude?"

Whereupon the German gulped convulsively, and then replied in the gentlest of voices:

"I haf my mouth full of schreus, undl could not speak till I swallow some!"—Harpers Weekly.

It Wasn't Funny.

"But he's a regular professional funny man."

"I know he is."

"But you referred to him as an 'unconscious humorist'."

"So he was on the occasion to which I refer. He had tried to be funny with a tough gent from the Fourth ward."

Philadelphia Press.

All Dear to Him.

Wife—The doctor orders me to the mineral baths at Carlsbad, and you refuse me the means to go. That shows how little you value me. Husband—On the contrary, I do not wish to lose a pound of you.—Ellegende Blatter.

Soak ink stains in sour milk, and should a stain still remain rinse in a weak solution of chloride of lime.

JINGLES AND JESTS

Rebellious Threats.

My father's gittin' meaner almos' ev'ry doggone day. He seems to think a zid was made to work instid of playin'. Heused to make me bring in coal in winter from the shed. An' now he makes me cut the grass; I wish that I was dead.

Some-day I'll run away an' git to be a king. An' when he says, "Why, hello, son?" I just won't say a thing; I'll call a lord er duke an' say: "Who dares address me thus?" An' then I'll have 'em throw him out when he kicks up a fuss.

Er maybe I'll go git to be a robber, brave an' bold. An' then come back an' hald him up an' rob him of his gold. I'll say, "Look here, you old guy, you, this awful act is did. Because you used to make me work when I was jist a kid."

Doggone it! How kin I play ball if I must cut the grass? An' how kin I keep clean if I can't git to swim? Alas! It's fierce to have a dad like him mixed up amongst yer kin. I guess I'll try to git big Mike, the cop, to run him in. —Denver Post.

But With a Hang Over.

Who goes out on a lark at night? Should heed this note of warning: A lark at night won't prompt a night to rise with it next morning. —Catholic Standard and Times.

Released.

"Willie, did you put your nickel in the contribution box in Sunday school today?"

"No, mamma, I sat Eddie Lake, the preacher's son, if I couldn't keep it an' spend it fer candy an' he give me permission." —Denver Post.

In Search of Peace.

Proprietress—And why did you leave your last place?

Maid—I was with some newly married people and I got tired of their everlasting "jarring" and "treasure."

Proprietress—Well, I have a place that will just suit you, then. The people have been married ten years.

Maid—Oh, that's too long. I want a little peace and quiet.—Vic Pour Rire.

Diamond Cut Diamond.

"Why do you cut your barber when you meet him on the street?"

"It's the only way I can get even with him for doing the same thing to me in his shop."—Cleveland Leader.

All Scrap.

"There won't be a scrap of evidence to convict you about that fight."

"I don't see how you make that out when it will all be evidence of a scrap."—Baltimore American.

Tower's Puzzle.

The thing that is the puzzle Which were my patience tries Is how within this maze To grab the wary flies Which light upon my nasal And curion on my eyes. —Chicago News.

Norway's Forests.

Of Norway's forest area the state owns 3,335 square miles, which bring an annual income of about $208,000. The annual expense connected with the public forests, "statals meeninging," as they are called, amount to about $125,000. The yearly profit derived by the state from this source is thus about $140,000.

SNAPSHOTS OF FASHION.

The Parisian Fancy For Violet—Charming Costumes of Fillee Lace.

Parisienne have for some reason taken a sudden and violent fancy for violet, the color of penance and ecclesiastical mourning, but it is applied so daintily and jauntily to hats that the fancy is justified by the effect. Many of the bell hats which are the fashion in the Rue de la Paix just now are made of violet straw and covered with a bunch of Paul Neron roses. They are most becoming and give the face an air of distinction. Very distinguished, too, for the races are the bell shaped violet straw hats. Other hats even more striking in some ways are those of white straw—a bold whiteness—garlanded with lilacs of the same color.

There is something decidedly charming about a gown of white fillet lace made over a white silk foundation. The lining makes the figures stand out in bold relief, and the rich cream color lends itself more favorably to the combination than almost any other tone. The fillet lace dress may be made as costly as desired.

The most popular evening gown of the moment is the one pictured in Louis XVI. style. There is a new method of painting on fabrics which does not suffer in the cleaning.

The frock with low neck and short sleeves is the ideal one for summer days for the small girl. Here is a fascinating little model that can be made from embroidered flouncing combined with plain lawn. A smart effect is carried out in pale blue lawn.

JUDIC CHOLLET.

OLIVE OIL.

Efficacious in pulmonary troubles. Has the elements of a perfect food. Of great value in incipient appendicitis.

Nutritive to skin in external application. Can be used in place of butter and lard.

Protects mucous membrane in cases of poisoning. Recommended in colic of intestinal, kidney or liver origin.

Recommended for prevention of formation of gall stones. Can be employed to advantage in coughs, colds and catarrhal affections.

Good for salad dressings, broiling and frying fish, oysters, steaks, chops. Stimulates the muscles and nerve fibers, increases nerve power and muscular development.

Is a mild laxative, prevents biliousness, clears the complexion and is used in eruptive fevers.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

STORY OF TWO DUELS.

A Sword Thrust, a Bullet Wound and an Extraordinary Sequel.

When duelling was an actual factor in the social order of this country it had many worthy and notable exponents, including no less distinguished personages than Henry Clay, Andrew Jackson, Alexander Hamilton, De Witt Clinton, Stephen Decatur and others of the same type, but nowhere on this continent was it so much an established institution as in that peculiarly romantic old city of New Orleans. It was woven into the very fabric of the life of the community, and many a crumbling tombstone in the antiquated creole cemeteries bears grim and silent witness to the fact, though to understand the situation more clearly one should breathe, so to speak, the atmosphere of the period.

M. Augustin, who afterward became a district judge and general of the Louisiana legion, was the victor in several encounters in which the temper of the period caused him to be engaged. One in particular is noteworthy on account of the part it played in an extraordinary freak of fortune. Alexander Grailhe was the offending party, though the insult, or rather, provocation, for gentlemen seldom insulted, would in this day be of scant concern. But some cause of action was present, and each was sure that a deadly meeting would certainly follow. They rode together in a carriage with ladies, who, after the duel, commented on their mutual affability during the entire trip, which only serves to show how delicately adjusted was the code of etiquette, especially in the presence of ladies.

They fought at The Oaks, and as soon as the weapons had been crossed and the impressive "Allez, messieurs," pronounced Grailhe, who was high strung and hot blooded—doubtless under the stress of what he regarded as a grievous provocation—lost his temper and furiously charged his antagonist. Augustin, on the contrary, was cool, collected and agile, parrying each savage thrust until by a tempo d'arrêt (sudden pause), judiciously interpolated into a vicious lunge of Grailhe's, he pierced him through the chest. Grailhe, with one of his lungs perforated, remained for a long time hovering between life and death, and when at last he did come out of his room he was bowed like an octogenarian.

It was now only a question of time for the wounded man, as an internal abscess had formed where it could not be reached—surgery then was not what it is now—and the doctors despaired of saving him. Some time after he had been up and about a quarrel with Colonel Mandeville de Marigny resulted in his challenging that distinguished citizen. This duel was also fought at The Oaks, but as Grailhe was too weak to do himself justice with a sword the weapons chosen were pistols, at fifteen paces, each to have two shots, advance five paces and fire at will. At the first shot, fired simultaneously, the unfortunate man fell forward, pierced by his adversary's bullet, which had entered the exact place of his former and yet unhealed wound. Marigny, with pistol in hand and as placid as a marble statue, advanced to the utmost limit marked out, when Grailhe, who was suffering greatly, exclaimed: "Fire again. You have another shot."

With grave dignity Marigny raised his pistol above his head and fired into the air, saying with frigid politeness, "I never strike a fallen foe."

The Oil Bird.

One of the animal curiosities of South America is the oil bird, or guacharo. It breeds in rock caves on the mainland, and one of its favorite haunts is the island of Trinidad. It lays its eggs in a nest made of mud, and the young birds are prodigiously fat. The natives melt the fat down in clay pots and produce from it a kind of butter. The caves inhabited by the birds are usually accessible only from the sea, and the hunting of them is sometimes an exciting sport.
